Say, folks....

[This is a TERRIBLE idea! Nuclear waste itself is a terrible idea. But if you've got some, don't put it in a sacred Native American zone. And DON'T PUT IT WHERE 13 EARTHQUAKE FAULTLINES CROSS! How about some common sense, and common decency?] ... Continued below

[Plus, how about all those NRC License Support Network documents that the Nevada Attorney General asked for? They were withheld claiming a work product privilege. But my understanding is that recent decisions by both the PAPO, NRC's Pre-application Presiding Officer, and a United States District Court Judge (Hon. Edward Reed, in a Freedom of Information Act case brought by Nevada) concluded that DOE's documents prepared for its NRC license application cannot be shielded under the work product privilege because these documents are prepared for the licensing process rather than for litigation.]

... 1 [So how about some common sense, and some common decency?
